Nara City Sightseeing Guide

From 710 to 784 the capital of Japan, Heijokyo, was located in present day Nara City. As is shown by the number of extant historical Buddhist images and buildings around Nara City, Japanese culture flourished here under the reign of successive emperors and empresses during that era. Several historical sites have been registered on UNESCO's World Heritage List as "Historical Monuments of Ancient Nara". Undoubtedly Nara is a treasure house of ancient history and culture set in a beautiful natural environment.

World Heritage Site Todaiji Temple

This temple is famous for the massive Vairocana statue, which is popularly known as Daibutsu (Great Buddha). Founded in the 8th century, the Daibutsuden Hall which houses the statue was burned down twice in fires that broke out as a result of war. The present structure, which was rebuilt in 1708, was scaled down to two-thirds of the original size. Nevertheless it is the largest wooden structure in the world.
Hours:8:00-17:00 (Nov. to Mar.) 7:30-17:30 (Apr. to Oct.)

World Heritage Site Gangoji Temple

This temple was originally founded in the 6th century as the first Buddhist temple in Japan. Even today several 6th century-roof-tiles are used for its Gokurakubo and Zenshitsu halls. These halls are said to be the architectural remains of the 8th century dormitory for Buddhist monks.
Hours:9:00-17:00 (Last admission at 16:30)

World Heritage Site Kasugayama Primeval Forest

This sacred forest extends behind the Kasuga Taisha Shrine. Since 841 when hunting and logging in this forest were banned, the forest has been preserved in the primeval condition. This has made the forest a sanctuary for various protected species.

World Heritage Site Kohfukuji Temple

Originally founded in the 7th century, 2010 marks the 1300 anniversary of the foundation of this temple. The five-story pagoda, a symbol of Nara City, was reconstructed about 600 years ago (1426) after it had burned down five times. A lot of national treasures and cultural treasures are exhibited at the temple's museum, Kokuhokan.
Hours:9:00-17:00 (Last admission at 16:45)

World Heritage Site Toshodaiji Temple

This temple was founded by Chinese Buddhist priest Jianzhen, Ganjin in Japanese, in 759 as an institute dedicated to the learning of Buddhist commandments. Several buildings in this temple date back to the 8th century. Among them, the main hall is the structure of the 8th century remaining, and the lecture hall is a building used at Heijo Palace.
Hours:8:30-17:00 (Last admission at 16:30)

World Heritage Site Heijo Palace Site

For about 70 years from 710, the capital of Japan was Heijokyo located in present day Nara City. Heijo Palace was situated at the northern end of the capital. Covering approx. 1.3 km from east to west and approx. 1 km from north to south, this site has been preserved as a special historic spot of Japan. Both of the Suzakumon Gate (1998) and Daigokuden Hall (2010) were restored.
Hours:9:00-16:30 (Last admission 16:00)
Closed on Mondays.

World Heritage Site Kasuga Taisha Shrine

Both paths to this shrine are lined with approx. 2000 stone lanterns, and the eaves of the shrine itself are decorated with around a thousand hanging bronze lanterns. It is also impressive to see the vermilion colored shrine buildings with cypress-bark roof stand in harmony with the natural environment. For information regarding the origin of this shrine, please read "Why are there so many deer in the park?" in this leaflet. Kokuhoden Hall (Kasugataisha Museum) 10:00-17:00 (Last admission at 16:30)

World Heritage Site Yakushiji Temple

Originally founded in 680, this temple prospered under the patronage of the imperial court in the 8th century. Since that time, the temple was to tragically lose all of its buildings to fire, with the exception of its east pagoda. Restoration work has continued since 1967, and today, visitors can see many buildings reconstructed by using traditional methods and techniques.
Hours:8:30-17:00 (Last admission at 16:30)

Sightseeing spots

Nara Park 奈良公園

Located in the central part of Nara City, this vast green area, popularly known as Nara Park, encompasses four world heritage sites of UNESCO. Their origins date back to at least the 8th century. In this park, history and nature blend in harmony. Another charm of this park is deer. Approx. 1200 wild deer roam around freely and they are so tame that you can make friends with them!

★Why are there so many deer in the park?

According to legend, when Kasuga Taisha Shrine was founded as a family shrine for the Fujiwaras, a dominant aristocrat clan in the 8th century, they invited a mighty god from Kashima Shrine (in present day Ibaraki Prefecture). The god is said to have come to Nara riding on a white deer. Since then, deer have been respected and protected as divine messengers by local people.

★Feed the deer Shika Senbei (deer crackers)!

The deer in Nara Park eat grass, bamboo leaves and buds. But Shika Senbei (deer crackers) is their favorite food. You can buy these crackers at several spots in the park. The deer in this park are so polite that they bow to you when they ask you for Shika Senbei!

Nara National Museum (9:30-17:00) 奈良国立博物館

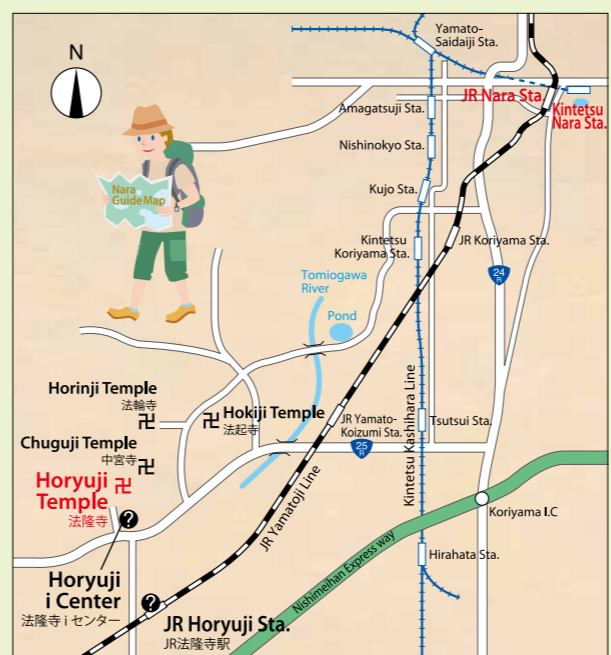

This neo-classical building was constructed as the second national museum in Japan in 1895 in Nara Park. Today this building is open to the public as Nara Buddhist Sculpture Hall. In 1972 a new museum building was constructed, and is used for special exhibitions.

Isuien Garden 9:30-16:30 (Last admission at 16:00) 依水園

This garden is full of charms; ponds, stepping stones, tea houses, a watermill, seasonal flowers... One of the most impressive scenes is a view of the Nandaimon Gate of Todaiji Temple and Wakakusayama Hill from the garden. They are incorporated into the garden as if they were a part of it.

Yoshikien-Garden 9:00-17:00 (Last admission at 16:30) 吉城園

Foreign tourists are free of charge. You need a certificate.

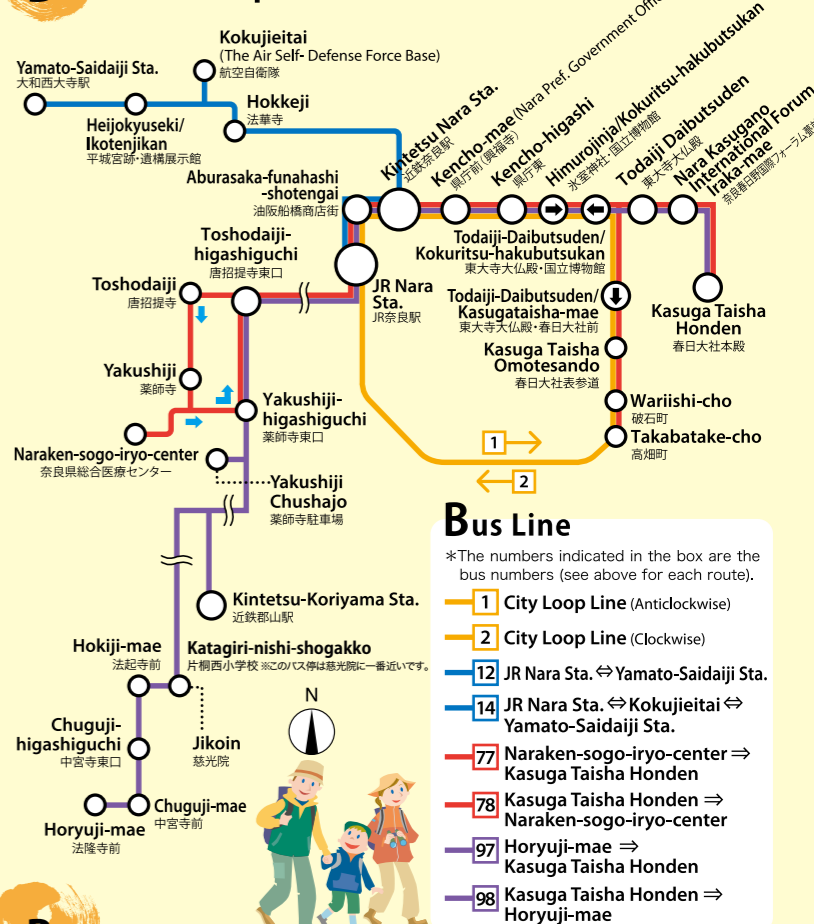

Horyuji Temple

(8:00-17:00 (Feb.22 to Nov.3) / 8:00-16:30 (Nov.4 to Feb.21)) 法隆寺

This temple is famous for including the oldest wooden buildings in the world. Originally founded in 607, the temple buildings were reconstructed in the early 8th century after being lost in fire. The five-story pagoda, the main hall, and some of the buildings have remained intact since then. In addition, various historical treasures including Buddhist images are on display at the temple's museum, Daihozoin.
